I was rather disturbed, if not surprised, by the NAB's current push to restrict satellite radio content. I currently am a happy XM radio subscriber and very pleased with the variety of content choices it provides. Additionally, as a business traveller to many major US cities, having a variety of city weather and traffic information at my fingertips via XM radio is an added benefit and convenience. XM is truly providing a national service, much as The Weather Channel provides national and local information in its TV broadcasts. As a paying customer, I hope to have some influence on the type of content XM radio provides. I would hope it is allowed to continue broadcast of such information. Squashing that from pressure from a dinosaur of a lobbying group would not bode well for an industry in its infancy. I hope that the FCC and Congress consider that and reject this petition for the good of this fledgling industry.
